

Improv Classes For Young Performers!

Meet The Instructor:

Mike Bradecich has been improvising and teaching improv and theater for twelve years. He started in Chicago, performing and teaching at the legendary Second City theater. He has also acted in countless commercials, and on TV shows such as Fargo, This Is Us, and Disney XD's Mighty Med.

He combines his love for improv with his love for education. He was the Administrator of Family Programs at The Field Museum in Chicago of eight years. He's written and performed children's theater around the country. Mike also has three young kids of his own and approaches teaching the same way he tries to parent, with patience and a lot of fun.

The skills learned in Mike's class not only help his students feel more comfortable on stage, but in real-life situations of all kinds. Improv builds confidence, listening skills, thinking on your toes, and cooperation. Improv skills are life skills!

Mike can tailor his classes to anything from a one-time workshop, to an 8-week class session.

Classes of 4 weeks or more include an evening performance for family and friends!

Classes are broken down by 8-12 year-olds and 13-18 year-olds.
